GOOGLE CLARITY AUDIT SCRIPT

Opener: the Google clarity audit:

Hey, is this [first name]? ... Hey [first name], it's [your name], with RightWay Growth. We're all set for your Google clarity audit.

(Smile. Then:) Quick agenda so you know how this goes. I'm going to show you exactly what a customer sees when they look for you on Google, where the inconsistencies are, and what's causing them. At the end, we'll both decide if it makes sense to work together.

And just so you know, we only take on ten clients at a time, so we can focus on the relationship, quality and results. So this is as much me seeing if you're a fit as you seeing if we are. Fair?

Slow, low, certain. You're the one who did the work. You don't need this deal. You're deciding who gets one of the ten spots.

Set the frame:

I just want to confirm, is [their email] still the best email for you? Perfect. I'm sending you a link to my screen right now. That way you see the exact same thing I see, and nothing gets lost in translation, OK?

(Send the link from the lead. Then:) It's coming from RightWay Growth. Let me know when you see it. Since we're on the phone, you don't need video or audio, just the screen.

Here's what we'll do. First, I'll confirm your business info. Then I'll show you the clarity audit we ran on [business], and we'll do a couple of searches together, live. But before I even start, I want a few minutes to get to know you and the business, because every business is different and we don't do cookie cutter.

Screen: share only the slideshow window. Cover slide, then the Agenda slide.

Discovery (write it down):

Screen: before the first question, switch to your Scan tool tab (opened from the Scan slide, "Run the full scan"). Their business and keyword are filled in. Add their other money searches, pick 9 x 9 or bigger, press Run scan, then switch back to the Agenda slide. It scans while you ask. Don't share the Scan tool tab yet.

Ask while it scans. Write every answer down. Make it conversational: you are the first person who cared to know.

1. How long have you been in business?

2. You a one man band, or you got a team working with you? (How many trucks or crews?)

3. What do you do to get your name out there? Any other advertising right now? Google Ads, Yelp, Angi, mailers, another agency? ... How's that working for you?

Make sure they can see your screen and the map before you go on.

4. How far out do you want to service? What cities matter most to you?

5. Do you have a website? ... Nice. You make it yourself, or did someone help you with that?

6. What's a typical job worth to you, ballpark? (Starting guess for [industry]: [job value].) And what kind of jobs, what searches, do you want MORE of?

7. How has business been lately? Busy, slow, up and down?

8. Are you actively trying to take on more customers right now? Could your crew handle five more good calls a week?

9. When a new customer finds you today, is it mostly referrals, or Google?

10. If nothing changes on Google for the next six months, what does that cost you? (Let them do the math. Stay quiet.)

Label it back: "So it sounds like you've built this on great work and referrals, and Google hasn't caught up to how good you actually are."

Verify the business:

That answers all my questions for right now. Thank you for going over that with me. We like to know every business we work with in detail, so we can actually help, not just guess.

Let me quickly verify your information. I have [business] in [city]. Is that the exact name customers know you by? Address and service area? Hours? And the best phone number for customers?

Now, when a customer needs you, what would they search? (Write their keywords down. Then:) And [keyword], is that one of your money searches?

Find what gets them excited. Ask more questions. The keywords they pick are the keywords you scan and pitch on.

Screen: the "How customers find you" slide: their listing next to the top 3. Or open Google Maps on their listing.

The clarity scan:

OK, so we're all set to keep moving. Here's the clarity audit we ran on [business]. [scan line from call prep]

[spread line from call prep] Same search, a couple of blocks apart, and you go from the first page to nowhere.

This is the part most owners never see. Google doesn't show the same results to everybody. It changes block by block, depending on where your customer is standing. So you can look great at your shop and be invisible two miles down the road.

And honestly, [first name], this is [lower than I expected / better than most, but there are still holes]. Usually what this tells me is that people who already know your name can find you, but people searching for the service, the ones who have never heard of you, are finding someone else.

Screen: switch the share to the Scan tool tab. The scan finished during discovery. Press Replay the scan so they watch it spot by spot. Point at their address first, then the farthest red square. Click each keyword tab to show every money search. Then press Save to lead and switch back to the slideshow: the Scan slide now shows this deep scan.

Search together:

Now, we can reference the scan, but I also want to jump over to Google with these searches and see pretty much what a customer sees.

Run the most basic search, "[keyword]", near their immediate area, or a spot the scan showed them weak.

IF THEY ARE NOT ON THE FIRST PAGE: Are you familiar with any of these guys? (Point at them.) In the mind of a customer, if you're not up here, you're not in the game. These are the businesses getting the calls first. And if we're struggling to find you this close to home, it only gets worse the further out we go.

IF THEY ARE ON THE FIRST PAGE: OK, perfect, there you are, right where you want to be. Now let's move out into your service area. (Search an area the scan shows them weak.) See what happens? A few miles out and you drop off. (No pause.) Again, these are the guys getting those calls first, and it only gets worse the further out we go.

And you know, conservatively, let's say there are about 4 or 5 people searching for this every single week. If just half of them go with [top competitor], that's like 2 or 3 jobs every single week going to the competitor. And that's just in your zip code. I wouldn't even want to guess what that number looks like further out.

Try to get them to give you the numbers instead of telling them. Get them to feel the pain of not showing up.

Screen: new tab, google.com. Search the keyword the way a customer would, then click Maps. Point at the top 3. Then back to the presentation, "You vs the leaders" slide: reviews, rating and category side by side.

Why they are up there (slow down):

SLOW DOWN. Stern, steady tone.

Now I want you to understand why these companies are up here. People think it's because they do better work than you. Or they're bigger. Or because Google likes them more.

When someone searches [keyword], Google looks at three things: how relevant your business is to that search, how close you are to the person searching, and how much Google trusts you. Trust comes from your Google profile being complete and active, your reviews, a website that backs it up, and your business information matching everywhere it shows up online.

When those pieces don't line up, Google gets less sure about you, and it plays it safe by showing someone else. Does that make sense?

[the top 3 problems from call prep, one at a time]

Screen: "What is holding you back" slide. One row at a time, plain words.

Inconsistencies:

Here's what I mean by inconsistencies. Google checks your business against dozens of other sites: Apple Maps, Bing, Yelp, Facebook, the BBB, and a lot of directories you've probably never heard of. Most people never search on those. But Google uses them to double check you.

And this isn't theory. On [business], [X] of the 15 directories I checked have you wrong or missing. Let me show you.

If one says one phone number, another says an old address, and another has the name a little different, Google gets less sure which one is right.

That doesn't fix itself with time either. Bad information gets copied from site to site.

So the first thing we do is clean it up and make it match everywhere, so Google stops doubting you. The way I want you to see this: the more consistent references Google sees, the more it trusts you, and that's what moves you up and brings in more business. Does that make sense? PERFECT.

Screen: "Inconsistencies" slide: their real listing check. Point at each red row, then the yellow ones. Click a row to open that directory and show the wrong phone or address. Not checked yet? Press Run the listing check now. Then the "Your website" slide if it shows, slow on phones costs calls.

Why we are having this conversation:

And that's exactly why we're having this conversation. Whenever we audit a business and see inconsistencies like these, and we can see it's affecting where you show up and how far out you show up, then obviously we're going to offer you a way to fix it.

It's our local growth program, and it's what we've just been going over. First we do a data cleanup: every listing with wrong or outdated information gets corrected, so the damage stops. Then we get you in front of every directory Google checks that doesn't know who you are yet, and we build out your Google profile the right way.

PAUSE

Now before I go any further, I want to make sure we're on the same page. Like I said at the start, we only take on ten clients at a time, so we can focus on the relationship, the quality and the results. And I'll be straight with you: our founder Vidal used to work inside the big marketing companies. Year long contracts, reports nobody could read, promises of number one on Google. RightWay was built to do the opposite. You see every task, you see the map every month, and after the first three months you can leave any time. Fair?

Screen: "What gets you results" slide: only the services they need. Point at each one as you say it. Drop or add one live if discovery says so.

What to expect:

Now let me explain quickly what to expect, because I'd rather be straight with you than overpromise.

Google ranks local businesses on three things: how relevant you are to the search, how close you are to the person searching, and how well known and trusted you are online. We can't move your address, so we work on the other two.

The first 30 to 60 days are the foundation: your Google profile built out the right way, your listings cleaned up, reviews coming in. Directories update on their own schedules, so the cleanup takes a few weeks to show everywhere. That's usually when owners see the first movement, and it tends to show up closest to the shop first, because distance is part of Google's formula.

From there it's months three to six: pages for your services and cities, more reviews, local links. That's what widens how far out you show up. It builds on itself. This is a marathon, not a sprint.

And you don't have to take my word for it: every month we run this same scan, so you see exactly what moved. Does that make sense?

Screen: switch the share to the Scan tool tab. Point at their address: "this is where the first movement usually shows." Then the red squares further out: "this is what the next months of work go after." Then back to the slideshow, "What happens after you say yes". Never promise a spot or a date.

Your app and your part:

SLOW DOWN.

The last thing I want to go over quickly is your app. When you start, you get your own login. You can go on any time and keep track of everything we do.

This is your home screen: the work we did this month and where you show up. This is Rankings: the map, month over month, compared to where you started today. Reviews: send a review request from your phone in five seconds. And Post a photo: snap a job, we write the post. We add new features every month, and you get them automatically.

Every month you meet with us for 15 to 30 minutes on a screen share like today. We show you all the work that's been done, the new map, and what's next. But the main reason we meet: we can do all the work behind the scenes, but without you as the owner involved, the whole process goes nowhere fast.

So as long as you send us photos of your jobs, let us know about any changes in the business, send your review link after a job, and meet with us for those 15 minutes, you will never be in the dark about what's going on. Can you do that?

And [first name], here's the honest picture: most of your customers look you up on Google before they call, even the referrals. What we do is make sure your information is right everywhere Google checks, get you in front of more of the searches that matter to you, and widen how far out people find you. That's how you start getting the calls that are going to [top competitor] right now.

Screen: "Your own Rightway app" slide. Tap through the live app as you say each part: Home, Rankings, Reviews, Post a photo. Then the "Reviews" slide if they trail the leader.

Trial close:

So after seeing exactly where you stand and doing a few searches, I'd say you're definitely a strong fit for one of our spots. How do you feel about it? Do you think it would help you grow?

(Let them answer. Then:) OK, great. Obviously you think it will help. It really just comes down to cost at the end of the day, right?

Screen: "What a few more jobs a month means for you" slide. Type their job value and how many extra jobs a month.

Price: the drop close:

Perfect. Based on everything you told me, here's what gets you where you want to go: [the services on their quote]. (Walk each one and why it gets them onto the first page in more of their area.)

The program comes in two parts: a one time buildout, which is us setting everything up the right way, and then a monthly for the ongoing work that moves you up and keeps you there.

If we did everything we offer, every service and every area, it would be [your top buildout] to build out and [your top monthly] a month. (Pause.) But based on what you told me, you don't need all of that. I'm not going to sell you things you don't need. That's the whole reason I started this company.

For what you need, the buildout is [buildout] and the monthly is [monthly]. Total today is [buildout + monthly], and your next payment isn't for 30 days.

And look, you told me a typical job is worth about [job value]. [X] extra jobs a month pays for the whole thing. Everything after that is yours. Honestly, I think not doing this costs you a lot more than doing it, just from the calls you're already missing in your own backyard.

Screen: "Your investment" slide. The amounts start blank: type the buildout and monthly you just decided. They save when you go to the next slide.

Close:

So after looking at everything and hearing what your goals are, from where I'm sitting this is the right way to get you there. How do you feel about it? Wouldn't you agree?

Then stop talking. The next person who speaks loses.

Great. Do you want the work order sent to your phone or your email?

Work order and payment:

Perfect. Let me walk you through the next steps so you're all set. First I'm sending you a one page work order. It's a digital signature. It puts everything we just went over in writing: the work, the price, the three month minimum. It's also what gives us permission to start. We'll take care of it while we're on the phone.

It takes about 60 seconds. Let me confirm the spelling of your first and last name, and the email. Remember, the total today is [buildout + monthly]: the buildout and your first month.

(Send the work order from the lead: Send work order. Then:) OK, I just sent it. It comes from Rightway Growth. Open it and read it over. Your name, business and today's date are already filled in. Just pick your signature and initials, check the box, and sign. Let me know if anything doesn't open.

(When it shows Signed:) Awesome, I see it signed. It takes you straight to the secure payment page by Stripe. That's the same card we use each month, and you can update it any time from your app or by asking your account manager.

(When the payment goes through, the Hub marks the deal won and makes the client.) Payment went through. You will have a receipt in your email.

Now remember, three months is the minimum because that's how long the buildout takes to really show. After that it's month to month. This is a marathon, not a sprint, so set your expectations for steady progress, not overnight. OK?

Screen: "Start this week" slide. Press Send the work order: they scan the QR code or you text or email the link.

Onboarding and homework:

Last thing: let's book your onboarding call. This is THE most important appointment in the whole process. It's where we get access to your Google profile and website and set everything up. It takes 30 to 45 minutes, and I'd really recommend being at a computer for it. Do you prefer mornings or afternoons?

It takes us a few business days to get everything organized before that first call, so you can hit the ground running.

(After booking:) You're booked for [day and time]. Here's your homework before then. One, read the confirmation email, it walks you through the first call. Two, put your best work photos in one folder so we can add them right away. Three, sometimes Google asks a business to verify again. If that happens we'll need proof the business is yours, like your business license or LLC papers and a utility bill in the business name. Have them handy. It's the difference between fixing it in 1 or 2 days instead of 1 or 2 weeks.

Alright [first name], you're all set. Anything else I can help with? Thank you for the vote of confidence. We're going to do great work for you, and you're going to see it.

Screen: stop sharing. Book the onboarding call from the client page, Meetings tab.

Book the audit for later:

(If they can't do the screen share right now.) No problem. The audit needs your eyes on the screen, it's 15 minutes. I have [time 1] or [time 2]. Which works better?

Perfect. I'm sending the invite with the link to [their email]. Is anyone else involved in the marketing decisions? Have them on the screen too, because we only hold the spot once.

Before we talk, search "[keyword]" from your phone and see who comes up. We'll go over it together.

Objections before price:

“I don't need another sales pitch”

Look, I completely understand. As a business owner you probably get more calls than you can count, all trying to sell you something you don't need. This is a clarity call. What I'm showing you is a problem that's already costing [business] calls every single month. If there's a way to fix it and get those calls back, it's at least worth a look, right?

“I know where this is going, I'm not buying anything today”

I hear you, and if I were in your shoes I'd be burnt out too. I'm not here to sell you a widget or a new website. I want to show you what's costing you calls and how it gets fixed, so at least you understand the problem AND the solution. If it all makes sense and it doesn't cost an arm and a leg, we'll probably end up working together. Fair?

“I already have someone handling my Google”

Good, that means you take it seriously. Quick question: do they show you a map like this every month? Right now you're on the first page in [X of Y] spots around you. Is that where you expected to be? (Let them answer.) I'm not going to talk badly about anyone. I'll just show you how we're different, and you decide. (Back to script.)

“My marketing company does this specifically”

Then I'd ask them one thing: where's my map? Usually it's one of two things. Either they're only working on the website, or they don't have a way to show you what's happening on the map. Based on what we just saw, I'd lean toward the second. I won't knock them, I'll just show you how we work. (Back to script.)

“I paid a company before and nothing happened”

Unfortunately I hear that every day, and it's exactly why I started Rightway. Just because you had a bad steak at one restaurant doesn't mean you never eat steak again. It means you don't go back to that restaurant, right? With us you see every task in your app and a new map every month. If we're not doing the work, you'll see it before I tell you. What happened with the last company? (Back to script.)

“I don't need more business”

That's a great problem to have. This isn't only about more business, it's about not losing the business you already earned. A lot of referrals Google you before they call. When they do, [top competitor] is sitting right there. All I want to do is take the reputation you've built and put it out on the highway where everyone can see it. Make sense?

“All my business is word of mouth”

Don't take this the wrong way, but that's old school, and there's nothing wrong with that. If this were 20 years ago we wouldn't be having this conversation. But today even a referral looks you up on Google before they call. If they can't find you, or they find [top competitor] first, that referral you earned just went to someone else. Let's make sure that doesn't happen. Follow along with me, OK? (Back to script.)

“How did my information get messed up?”

Just like Google, these sites pull from databases, any and all of them. An old listing, a data company, a site you've never heard of. Once it's out there it gets copied. The goal is to correct it everywhere, so Google sees one consistent business. (Back to script.)

“Can I just fix this myself?”

You could, and I'll respect it if you try. It's a lot of hours: every listing, every login, every verification, posts every week, photos, reviews, pages, links, and keeping it all matching as Google changes. Most owners start, get busy running the business, and it stops. Is that the best use of your time, or would you rather be on jobs? (Back to script.)

“I need to check with my website company first”

I hear you loud and clear. Most of the time they're working on the website, not the Google map. We do website work too, but this is different work. The good news is this doesn't get in the way of anything they're doing. If they could do this, they'd already be doing it, right?

“I'm already paying for website SEO, why do I need this?”

Great question. You're a local business. Your customers are within a few miles of you, and the map is what they see first, above the regular results. Website work helps, but if you're not on the map in your area, you're missing most of the local calls. You saw it on the scan. See how that's affecting the business?

“How long does this take to work?”

Honest answer: profile fixes and listing cleanup start moving things in the first 30 to 60 days. Pages, reviews and links build over three to six months. The hard part isn't getting you up, it's keeping you up there. That's why we meet every month for 15 to 30 minutes. Your feedback speeds it all up. Make sense?

“Why is there a setup fee and a monthly?”

Because most of the heavy lifting happens up front. The buildout is the profile, the cleanup on every listing, the first pages and the tracking. The monthly is the steady work that moves you up and keeps you there. We put in the work first. And I only keep you if it's working, because after three months you can leave any time.

“What if I do this and it doesn't work?”

That's fair to ask. Here's what I can tell you: you'll see every task we do and the map every month, so you'll know if it's moving long before month three. And after the first three months you can leave any time with 30 days notice. You're never stuck paying for something that isn't working. Fair enough?

“Can you guarantee number one?”

Anybody who guarantees number one on Google isn't being straight with you, because Google decides, and where your customer is standing changes it. What I guarantee is the work: every task we agree on, every month, shown in your app, with the map to prove where you stand.

Objections after price:

“It's too expensive”

I get it, it's an expense you weren't planning on. Let me ask you this: what's one job worth to you? (They answer.) So all we need is [X] extra jobs a month and you're in the green. Everything after that is profit. If we only got you [X] jobs, would it be worth it?

“I can't afford it”

I understand, you weren't waving your card in the air waiting for my call. But look at the screen with me. When someone searches [keyword] near you, [top competitor] is getting that call. Once we fix this, those calls start coming to you. If even two of them do business with you, does that cover [monthly]? Then in my opinion you can't afford not to do this, right?

“I can't afford it (drop)”

OK, then let's right size it. I'd rather start you on what fits than not start you at all. We start with the core: your Google profile buildout, the listing cleanup, weekly posts, reviews and the monthly map. That's [next lower price] to build out and [next lower price] a month. We add the rest when the calls start coming. Does that work better?

“I can't afford it (end)”

Are you telling me [monthly] is going to have you on the street corner with a soup can? (Smile.) If this takes food off your table, don't do it. But if it doesn't, why not make a move so next month the bills are paid and there's extra in the account? When this brings in one or two new customers a month, it pays for itself. (Drop close if they're still on.)

“I need to think about it”

If we were talking about a car loan at 10% for 60 months, I'd say think about it too. But this is a problem that's already costing you calls every month. Fixing it costs a few hundred dollars, and a job or two a month covers it. So what's left to think about, besides where you're taking the family on vacation this year? (Then drop close or soft close at the same price.)

“I need to think about it (2)”

Sure, it's smart to think about big decisions. Let me ask you: what makes more sense, losing your word of mouth referrals to the guy next door because they find his number when they look you up, or being the one taking the calls and taking more of the local market?

“I need to think about it (3)”

To be honest with you, we're talking about a few hundred dollars to reach the customers your business should have been getting since day one. What's the bigger risk: a few hundred dollars you'll easily make back, or letting the last six months repeat themselves for the next six?

“I need to think about it (end of the line)”

What do we really need to think about here? Do you need to sit in the armchair tonight and decide whether you want to make more money? Or is something about the plan not sitting right? (Then stop and listen.)

“No”

[first name], there are only three reasons someone in your shoes says no: fit, function or finance. It's not fit, you told me this would help the business. If you don't understand how it works, that's on me and I'll explain it better. So is it just the finances? (If yes, use the drop.)

“I'm not doing anything today”

Look, I'm totally fine if we don't work together. But a minute ago you told me [their pain] is hurting your growth. Now that a real fix is in front of you, there's a wall up. I see it all the time. It's usually not the money or the plan, it's just making a change. Am I reading that wrong, or is that what's happening here?

“I'm not doing anything today (end of the road)”

Fair enough. It sounds like right now, staying exactly where you are is still more comfortable than changing it. And that's OK. I appreciate your time today. I'll send you the scan so you have it, and when you're ready, you know where to find me.

Objections any time:

“I need to talk to my partner or spouse”

Makes sense, this should be a joint decision. What do you think they'll ask? (Answer it now.) Let's get 15 minutes with both of you so they see the same map. Does [time 1] or [time 2] work?

“Just send me an email”

Happy to. So it doesn't get buried, what part should I focus on? (Let them answer.) Honestly, the map makes way more sense on the screen than in an email, and it's 15 minutes. Does [time 1] or [time 2] work?

“I'm busy right now”

Totally get it, you're running a business. The clarity scan takes 15 minutes on a screen share. Is later today or tomorrow morning better? I'll put it on my calendar and call right on time.

“Are you with Google?”

No, we're an independent local marketing company in Miami and Fort Lauderdale. We help businesses show up better on Google and get more calls from it.

“How did you get my number?”

Your business number is public on your Google listing. I came across [business] while checking who shows up for "[keyword]" in [city].
